MAYOR STRONG SENDS HIS RESPECTS

Field Marshal's Plans for the Remainder of His Stay in New York Not Yet
Arranged—May Visit the Navy Yard To-day.

Field Marshal Yamagata bowed his bared head before the tomb of General Grant yesterday. To this visit attaches the greatest sentiment, for the foremost soldier of the Orient had the deepest admiration for the hero of the rebellion. During the American soldiers visit to the land of the Mikado, Yamagata, who was then a colonel, acted as his personal escort. He is probably far better acquainted with the details of Grant's life than most persons in the United States.

The Marshal did not retire until quite late on Monday night, despite the fact that he had spent the day in a somewhat exhausting journey. He took breakfast at 9:30 o'clock yesterday morning. Then he returned to his rooms and was busy for some time over official matters with Minister Kurino. General McAlpin was a visitor during the forenoon, and it was understood after his departure that the Marquis may entertain the Governor's staff at dinner before he takes his departure on Saturday.

Scores of cards were sent to the distinguished visitor during the day, and the mails contained several invitations and requests for his autograph. George Francis Train sent one of his characteristic old and blue pencilled postal cards. He welcomed the hero of the Orient to the hospitality and greatness of the Occident, and invited him to attend the Thirteenth Club dinner, on April 13, at the Hotel Richelleu. This invitation was, however, as will be seen, a trifle late.

PRETTY AUTOGRAPH FLEET.

Curious men and women visited the hotel all day long, in the hope of catching a glimpse of the distinguished visitor, and it was from many of these that cards came. One very pretty girl had a large Russia leather bound autograph album, and when she found that she could not be shown at once into the presence of the old fighter, she grew almost tearful and, taking a seat in the lobby, declared she would sit there until the hero passed. She became tired after an hour and left the hotel, nothing daunted, however, for she cheerfully declared that she would return to-day.

A message was received from Mayor Strong at 2 o'clock, saying that he would pay a visit at the hotel at 6 o'clock, or send his representative, Mr. Hedges. At the same time one of the members of the Governor's staff, resident in this city, sent the suggestion that the Marquis and his suite visit the City Hall, Police Headquarters and Fire Headquarters. This was politely declined. The Marquis said his health was such that he preferred to be quiet as possible.

He went driving at 4 o'clock accompanied by Minister Kurino, Colonel Oshima and Chief Secretary Tsubokuni. The party occupied a landau, and were driven up Fifth avenue to the Park. The Minister, who appeared to be well acquainted with the route, pointed out the different palatial homes to the Marquis, who seemed to be especially interested in those of the Vanderbilts. He turned and looked back at them even after the carriage had passed.

AT THE TOMB OF GRANT.

Driving around the north end of the Park, the landau entered One Hundred and Tenth street, then to Morningside Park. The Marquis liked the view of the city from the heights. When Riverside Drive was reached the carriage was stopped for a minute so as to give the visitors an opportunity to view the great white mausoleum in course of erection. Then they were driven around in front of the temporary tomb, where they alighted. Two big park policemen, standing rigid and gray at the bottom of the steps leading to the tomb, looked at the visitors in wide-eyed wonder, but made no other sign. About fifty cyclists and other persons on an outing sat along the river walk, stopped their small talk and gazed curiously at the four foreign looking men. Then a young man in golf stockings slacked up on his wheel in passing, and looking in the direction of the general gaze, said, "Yamagata!" And so the word was passed along. Drivers and wheelmen drew up to see the sight.

It was all very simple, however. Marshal Yamagata led the way with Minister Kurino. Reaching the top of the flight of steps, all four men uncovered their heads as in an accord, and with almost the same uniformity of action they bowed their heads. They stood thus for several seconds. A white-haired old man, who had caused his coachman to stop, while going south, took off his hat and bowed his head, too. When the Japanese looked up again, he resumed his hat and told his driver to proceed.

The Marshal and his companions looked with interest into the tomb, but uttered no word. Then they descended the steps and walked with bared heads back to the drive. They did not enter their carriage, but, alighting, the driver to follow them, crossed to the west side and walked northward. When they reached Claremont they paused, as though undecided to re-enter the landau, but they continued their walk around on the east side of the tomb and down Riverside Drive.

A PRESUMPTUOUS CIVILIAN.

At One Hundred and Tenth street a crowd of small boys looked curiously at them, and a tall young man, equally curious, turned and walked along beside them and began to ask questions. The Marquis was obviously annoyed, and he and his party crossed the drive to the west side. The river was covered with a gray mist and there was little of a view to be had, but the gentlemen continued to walk for five blocks further before they re-entered their carriage. They were driven direct to the Waldorf and arrived there shortly after 6 o'clock. There the Marquis stayed last night.

Minister Kurino said it had not been decided yet whether a visit would be made to West Point, but thought it improbable. Job Hedges called in the evening and presented the regards of the Mayor. It is expected that the Commandant of the Navy Yard will be the principal visitor to-day.

Edmund G. Thurber, who was recently released from Bloomingdale, was married to Mrs. Fanny Clare True in Philadelphia yesterday, and went from there to Atlantic City, N. J., where they are spending their honeymoon.

A Sheriff's Jury on April 8 declared Edmund G. Thurber sane and quite competent to manage his person and estate. His brother, William H. Thurber, tried to have him adjudged a lunatic in order, it was said, to prevent his marriage to Mrs. True. Thurber has about $35,000, and the marriage meant that the reversionary interest in his estate would be lost to his relatives.

GERMAN ARMY FRAUDS. Subalterns in Many Branches Caught Manufacturing Prize-Winning Records.

By Henry W. Fischer.
Berlin, April 14.—The Kaiser has unearthed a big conspiracy, extending over several years, in the army.

Many infantry, cavalry and artillery regiments are concerned, it being declared that subalterns in these various branches of the service have been systematically manufacturing exceptionally high shooting records, as well as records of long distance rides, in order to obtain the much coveted prizes.

The Kaiser's suspicions were aroused by being so often asked for rewards by the same persons successively, and he ordered an investigation, the result of which has created a sensation, not only in army circles, but generally.

DREW ALL HIS MONEY.

The day before disappearing Weber drew from the Corn Exchange Bank the amount standing there to his credit—about $25,000. It was his custom to make collections upon foreign drafts and deposit in that bank. Then, when a considerable sum had accumulated, he would draw it out and purchase exchange on Europe for his London firm.

Since Weber's disappearance several thousand dollars of additional collections have been made by the Western Agency, Limited, and these will be attached by the counsel for Blythe, Green, Jourdain & Co. Weber was first conspicuous in the business world as manager of the mercantile department of Knoblauch & Lichtenstein, then New York agents of the Deutsche Bank, of Berlin. While so employed he handled hundreds of thousands of dollars. Later he held a position of responsibility as a trust with the firm of Milners, McGowan & Co. In 1884 he embarked in business for himself and was prospering almost from the start.

The Western Agency, Limited, was a small corporation, and most of its shares were held by Mr. Weber and his wife and their immediate friends. The corporation acted as agents for European shippers and did a big business. The banking business, as representative of Blythe, Green, Jourdain & Co., was conducted separately.

Weber was a member of the German Club, of Stapleton, and was popular. His wife and two children have a large acquaintance in German social circles.

OLCOTT'S UNLUCKY BET.
Loses a Wager to Alderman Dwyer and Must Vote with the Latter for a Year.

Alderman Dwyer, who recently won a bride-kissing bet, is having sport with Alderman Olcott, who lost the wager. Alderman Olcott will not be free from trouble for one year, and Dwyer is prepared to make the most of it. The first intimation of the compact appeared at the Aldermanic meeting yesterday, when Dwyer introduced this resolution:

Resolved, That the Original House of the Eighth Ward be permitted to parade 6,000 strong with a brass band and five drum corps and two cannons through Fifty-fourth street, from Central Park West, with the privilege of marching and countermarching through said street, such permission to continue only from 7 o'clock a. m. on Sunday, April 13, 1896, until 7 a. m. April 20, 1896.

The document required half a dozen readings before the Aldermen could grasp its meaning, and then they were almost overcome when Alderman Olcott voted "Yea." He stoutly refused to change his vote, though he was told that the House would pass and repass his own house all day. The resolution was finally lost, and his fellow members regarded Olcott with mingled feelings of pity and alarm until the queer measure was explained.

It seems that at the wedding of Alderman Marshall, last week, Olcott bet Dwyer that the latter could not kiss the bride, owing to the difference in their stature. Dwyer accepted the challenge, with the proviso that if he succeeded in planting a kiss on the lips of the bride Olcott should vote for any resolution Dwyer might offer within the next year.

Olcott agreed, and Dwyer set about carrying out the enterprise. Some time during the evening the small Alderman climbed upon a chair when the bride was not looking and won his bet. The resolutions are now on tap and Olcott is expected to vote for one at every meeting of the Board.

HART IS UNDER ARREST.

Owner of the Bermuda and the Officers on the Boat to Be Tried Here for Their Acts.

Philadelphia, April 14.—United States Marshals to-day arrested Captain John D. Hart, managing owner of the steamship Bermuda, for his connection with the recent voyage of the vessel to Cuba with a supply of arms and ammunition.

The warrant for Captain Hart's arrest was sworn out on information given by Jose Caugosto, the Spanish Consul at that port. Hart gave bail in the sum of $50 for a hearing to-day. Many promises, Cubans offered to go on his bond for any amount.

A warrant for Colonel Amelio Nunes, a tobacco importer, of this city, was also issued. He is a leader among local Cubans and is credited by the Spaniards with having accompanied the expedition and having attended personally to the landing of the men and the munitions of war. The names of Captain John O'Brien, who was in command of the Bermuda; First Mate Murphy and Second Mate Simonsen were also on the warrant, but they were not to be found. Captain O'Brien is said to be in New York. The matter is thought to be in New York.

W. W. Ker, counsel for Hart, told the United States District-Attorney that the others for whose arrest the warrant was issued do not want to stand trial in this city. He said that if the case were transferred to the New York courts, the Bermuda having sailed from that port, his clients would surrender immediately. He said that in the New York courts they would secure simple justice, and they are not afraid of that. It was agreed the men should be tried in New York, and soon after Horatio J. Rubens, counsel for the Cubans in that city, telegraphed that O'Brien and his men would be on hand for a preliminary hearing here to-morrow.

The report that Captain O'Brien and the first and second mates of the Bermuda would surrender themselves to the United States Marshal to-day was regarded with doubt by the Federal officials yesterday. Deputy Marshal Kennedy said:

"I know nothing of warrants for the arrest of these men, and cannot understand how warrants could be secured against them in Philadelphia. If there was any charge against them, it was for something done here, but I know of no charge. If they were to come in by one door to surrender themselves, I would let them go by another door. I have no authority to retain them."

THE old man who looks out of the window with clear and healthy eyes cannot help feeling great gratification at the thought that his children's children have inherited from him no weakness nor tendency to disease.

FIELD MARSHAL YAMAGATA AND THE JAPANESE MINISTER AT GENERAL GRANT'S TOMB.

With the exception of a drive through Central Park and to the Grant Mausoleum in Riverside Park, the Marquis Yamagata did no sight seeing yesterday. Many cards were left for him at the Waldorf during the day, but he did not see many visitors. Mayor Strong did not call in person, but sent his respects by Secretary Hedges. The Marquis will sail on Saturday. His plans for to-day have not been fully determined, but he may pay a visit to the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

heim's reception are totally without foundation in fact.

My Vienna correspondent informs me that the military was notably in the background throughout all the festivities.

While the two Emperors were enjoying themselves at receptions and state dinners, he also says, the Chancellors were busy as bees. Hohenzollern spent all the day with Goluchowski.

The first result of the conferences of these two Chancellors is the erasing of the emblems of Lombardy and Venetia from the Austrian Imperial coat-of-arms, which will please Italy immensely.

Vienna, April 14.—The Emperor and Empress of Germany, with their two eldest sons, Crown Prince William and Prince Elitel Frederick, arrived here at 10:15 o'clock this morning. They were received at the Southern Station by Emperor Francis Joseph, attended by five archdukes, two archduchesses and a brilliant suite. The station was guarded by the Tyrol Chasseurs.

After an exchange of greetings the two Emperors entered an open carriage, drawn by six white horses, and were driven to the Palace. The Empress and the Princes and the other members of the Imperial party entered similar carriages and followed the Emperors.

The streets were crowded and the visitors were enthusiastically cheered. The weather was cold.

During the proceedings his relatives admitted that they were trying to have him declared insane, partly to prevent his marriage to Mrs. True, who had just obtained a divorce. They said she wanted to obtain Thurber's money.

Thurber was subjected to one of the severest cross-examinations ever heard in the Supreme Court of this city. He answered all questions clearly and concisely, and made the soundness of his mind manifest to all who heard him.

He said that he had been released from the Butler Hospital for the Insane at Providence, R. I., to which he had been committed by his relatives, only on condition that he make a journey to Australia, which he did.

He said that his father had made him go through a struggle for a living in order that his two brothers might have plenty of money with which to start in business. He declared that he was betrothed to Mrs. True.

Mrs. True testified that she had never seen Thurber irrational except when under the influence of morphine, prescribed for him by a physician. She said she expected to marry him.

It took the jury only half an hour to decide upon a verdict in favor of Thurber.

The St. Lawrence River is rising at a dangerous rate at Montreal. The water reached a height of 11 inches last night from the level of Commissioners street. Some houses are exposed as to the ability of the dyke to keep out the flood longer.

The British steamer Empress arrived at Algiers with her crank shaft broken. The British steamer Lake Winnipeg, Captain Taylor, at Liverpool from St. John, N. B., reports having passed an immense iceberg on April 6.

CHURCHES BAR SCHRADER.

None of Them Permit the Dead Duelist's Body to Lie in It, "By the King's Order."

By Henry W. Fischer.

Berlin, April 14.—The body of Baron Schrader, who died Saturday night from the wounds received the day before in the duel with Von Kotze, has not been permitted to lie in any church by the Kaiser's special orders.

It was carried to several edifices successively, but all were found closed "by the King's order."

The Empress Frederick was finally appealed to, but without success. She sent regrets and at the same time expressed her horror at the fatal duel.

Von Kotze has gone to the Tyrol. The police have not yet taken any action in the matter.

GUIANA GOLD MINERS ALARMED

They Fear an Adverse Decision by the Venezuelan Commission.

Colon, Colombia, April 14.—Advices received here from Georgetown, Demerara, British Guiana, show that investors are stopping further ventures in gold mining, fearing that the decision of the American Venezuelan Commission will be adverse to the territorial claims of Great Britain.

A general suspension of mining operations in the disputed territory is expected.

Western Agency, Limited, of No. 17 William street, and New York representative of the London banking firm of Blythe, Greene, Jourdain & Co., successors to Bencecke, Londray & Co., has disappeared, and with him, it is said, has disappeared $25,000 in collections, the property of the London firm. A typewriter, Miss Miller, has not been seen at the William street office since March 28, when Weber was last seen. Weber's wife and two children, who live in Stapleton, S. I., believe that he has eloped with the typewriter and that they will never see him again.

IN WALL STREET MANY YEARS.

Weber is fifty-eight years old, a slight, undersized, bearded man, whose somewhat eccentric figure was well known in Wall Street. He was in Wall Street thirty-five years, and it would be remarkable if he were not well known.

Weber has two children—a son, twenty-one years old, and a daughter, Daisy, who is twenty-three years old.

Weber told his daughter, who was at his office March 28, that he must go to Germany at once, and that he had received word that his father was dying. There was no time to go to his home on Staten Island. It was then too late for the Saturday sailing of New York steamships, and he left the office hurriedly, saying that he would go to Boston and sail by the Bothnia.

The London firm of Blythe, Green, Jourdain & Co. was informed by cable that he had done so. When the Bothnia arrived and Weber made no call at the London offices inquiries were set on foot, and it was discovered that he had not sailed by the healthy man. Germs go through the body without effect. They are hurried along rapidly and thrown off before they have time to develop or increase. Let them once find lodgment or let them find a weak spot, they will develop by the million and the blood will be full of them. Instead of rich, life-giving properties, the blood will be a sluggish, putrid tide of impurity. Instead of giving strength to the tissues, it will force upon them unwholesome and insubstantial matter, and the man will lose flesh. The more flesh he loses and the weaker he becomes, the more susceptible he is to disease. His trouble will become complicated and serious complications will follow. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the only medicine that absolutely and infallibly cures all blood diseases, and almost all diseases of blood diseases. It isn't a medicine for some one particular sore disease. It is a medicine for the whole body. It forces out all the germs of disease, replaces impurities with rich, red blood, feeds the tissues and makes strong, healthy flesh.
